PREFACE

The want of a Directory of Libraries in Bengal was being keenly felt since the inauguration of the library movement in this province, now about eighteen years ago. With a view to remove this long-felt want we decided, some five years back, to compile a Directory. The task was not an easy one. We appealed to those concerned for co-operation in the columns of newspapers, but the response was very poor indeed. We then started correspondence with individual libraries, and materials began to reach us in dribblets. After strenuous efforts for all these years, we have now been able to compile and publish materials regarding 1,300 public libraries, 73 university and college libraries, 2,066 school libraries and 79 special libraries. For this compilation, our best thanks are due to the Director of Public Instruction, a number of District Officers and the Education Officer of the Calcutta Corporation, without whose co-operation the publication of this Directory would not have been possible. During this period, materials collected at the earlier stage had to be recast or revised to make them up to date. We do neither claim infallibility in the compilation nor claim it to be a complete list of libraries in the province. We believe there are many more public and school libraries which have been left out—of course, not intentionally, but for non-supply of information by the institutions concerned. We hope they will be forthcoming in the near future for publication as a supplement to the Directory or in the next edition, if it ever comes to light.

About six years ago, the Bengal Library Association opened a Summer Course of Training in Librarianship which turned up a good number of qualified librarians. The Imperial Library training centre has also to its credit another goodly number. These have enabled us to include in this Directory a list of qualified librarians in and of this province.

We hope this Directory will serve the purpose for which it has been compiled and its public appreciation will be judged by its sale proceeds as well as by the use it is put to by libraries and librarians, authors, printers, publishers and booksellers. In these days of scarcity and dearness of paper and printing materials, the publication of a volume like this, is no doubt, a very expensive and ambitious undertaking. We have run the risk nevertheless. Future will judge its justification or otherwise.

It is my privilege to acknowledge with thanks the great help which the Association has received from Messrs. Tincori Dutta and Pulin Krishna Chatterjee in the compilation of the Directory.
